FACTORY GIRLS IN A BIG CITY.

An Entire Morning Spent in Looking for Indiscoverable Work.

One Unfortunate With a Drunken Father, a Tired Mother and a Home Squalid, Crowded and Ill-Smelling.

I determined to try some of the other candy factories in the city, for surely there must be places where I could earn more than 22 a week, the wages paid at Plow's for packing. This was the busy season, too, so near the holidays.

I had seen girls much younger than myself making various kinds of French candies in one room at the Plow's factory and one of them told me her wages were $4. As I watched her molding and sugaring dainty morsels I was confident that with a very little experience I could do as well as she. The main thing, of course, was to get a chance to try.

Early as usual I started out, going first to Blanche Bros., candy factory, 638 Market street. Here a throng of applicants, girls and boys, preceded me, all waiting their chance to see the foreman.

He came soon and immediately blasted our hopes by saying that there was nothing for us; he had all the help he wanted for that day.

Three or four boys and most of the girls made for the door, anxious to hurry to some other place, I supposed. One bright-eyed little girl, who told me she was a "dipper," said: "The St. Louis Candy Company needs girls—corner Ninth and Gratiot. Good-bye, I'm going to try there," and off she went.

I noticed several girls remained, and more out of curiosity than anything else I stayed, too.

We stood about patiently, or sat on boxes, when the draymen, who were actively engaged in making up first loads, would let us.

One girl had her mother with her, a stout German woman who looked the very personification of patience. Several times she and her mother, who was a little older than she, came on, and she would say: "Come on, ma, let's try somewhere else."

This didn't do good. But calm and importunate, the mother kept her place, replying to her daughter's impatient exclamations: "We wait a little longer—we wait a little longer."

Presently I saw the object of their waiting. A clerk stepped to the telephone near by, rang up the foreman upstairs and said: "Say, Al, do you need any more girls today?"

"Oh, four or five, I guess"—this in answer to a question at the other end.

"Well, come down as soon as you can," and rang off. Turning to us he said: "The foreman'll be here right away."

So we were to have another chance. "Al" appeared shortly, and when he saw the girl who had been waiting, he said: "You're the one I want. Being the only elderly woman, of course she commanded his respectful attention, and when he saw her, he said: 'You're the one I want.'"

"Well, I only need one girl today. You can go upstairs"—to the daughter, the rest of us felt sadly out of it. "You're the one I want," he said, and he drew her away from the crowd.

I thought of Billy Andrews, who came from my old home to St. Louis a year ago to clerk in a big dry goods store. Her wages were $4 a week, for she wrote and told me so, soon after taking the place. The first Sunday I came, I started out to find her, for she had been an old school friend whom I liked. Going to the address she wrote me, I found she had just about to leave for a walk with a friend, who was waiting for her.

Both girls were almost the handsomest I had ever seen, with velvet capes and big hats loaded with flowers and plumes. I noticed two large diamond rings on Billy's hand and another stone in a pin at her neck.

My astonishment could not be concealed. Tilly, whose family were in the poorest of circumstances in Peoria, and whose own wages but $5 a week, now so gaily and fashionably dressed that I hardly knew her by the same girl I had shared my lunch with often in the days of the old brick school house, and who now had a mother and given many a cast-off article of clothing.

"Tilly," I said, "where did you get all those fine things? Have you paid for them? Surely you didn't steal them!"

She looked at me a moment, then, with a wink at the other girl, burst into a loud laugh, in which her companion heartily joined.

"You little innocent, you don't know much, and that's a fact," said she. "There are lots of other ways of getting things besides stealing them, ain't there, Nell?" and with another laugh the two girls went off for their walk homeward, leaving me sick, God willing, I would keep myself honest and clean and pure.

Denial itself were better than the lives those girls were leading. But I have depressed. As I left Blanche Bros. I noticed two young girls, who had been waiting also, stop at the door, and one said:

"Well, where'll we go next?"

"Let's try the St. Louis Candy Company, over on Gratiot street."

I was going there, too, so we three started out together.

They had both been looking for work for a week, they told me.

"We tried Ledges & Myers's tobacco factory this morning. They want girls there, but I told him I was 17, but he wouldn't believe me, 'cause I'm so short. Ross, here is only 15, and she ain't very big, either."

There was a marked difference in the clothing of the two girls. The one who talked most was a thin-faced, hollow-eyed slip of a girl, was—of no shabbily clad in an old calico dress, with a much-worn cape reaching only as far as the knees and offering almost no protection against the cold piercing winds. Her head was tucked up in a black knitted arrangement, the ends of which hung down in front. In the hair she occasionally showed her blue little hands to keep them from becoming stiff with cold. Her shoes were good, I noticed, or whole, at least.

Ross, the other girl, wore a stout black jacket, mittens and a warm hat. I wondered how the two came together.

"Do you girls live near each other?" I asked.

"Yes—in the same yard," Ross answered. "I keep house for my brother, or I did," she added, correcting herself. "He got married and before yesterday, and now I can't stay there no more. I ain't never worked out, and I was kind of glad they didn't take erable heat and bearing on top two flat irons and some kind of odoriferous vegetable cooking in a tin pan. Two or three chairs, a small child's bed behind the door with a bit of carpet in front of it, a shelf, with a small clock, two or three chromos and a child's photograph on it, a sink and drain in one corner, the stench from which was most unpleasant, and over in the window one poor little place, growing in a tin can, completed the furnishing of the room.

Two small children, girl and boy, now burst in from the outside and announced in no gentle tones that they were hungry. A bright-faced lad in clothes clean and neatly patched came tramping up the stairs. This was Bobby. He, too, was ready for dinner. Sarah pulled out the table, on whose oil cloth covering she placed a few dishes, knives and forks. Then lifting the tin pan from the stove, she gave it the post of honor in the middle of the table, produced a loaf of bread from a cupboard, which she cut in thick slices, and dinner was ready. The little children stood, or sat, alternately on their mother's or Sarah's laps, since there were not enough chairs to go round.

We had the contents of the tin pan, a mixture of turnips and cabbage, and bread the children dipping their pieces into a bowl full of some kind of thin grease or dripping. That was all. Such as it was I was welcome, and I tried to eat a little. After the meal, Sarah washed up the dishes, while her mother proceeded to finish the ironing. I stayed awhile longer, and then thanking them for their kindness and wishing Sarah success that afternoon in finding a place, hurried myself to see the afternoon papers and find the good luck they might have for me.

LACLEDE GAS.

No Decision Rendered, but a "Leak" Has It That the Ruling Will Be Adverse.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—The Laclede Gas decision was not handed down in the Supreme Court to-day, although it was confidently expected. The stock has been speculated in to a large extent the last few days, and the break in price from 22 to 23 was due to information alleged to come direct from the court that the justices, at a consultation last Friday, had agreed to decide against the company. That there is a leak somewhere through which the court's alleged stand on various points goes to the stock operators before the decisions are handed down seems certain, and the Laclede Gas case is notoriously in point.

It is stated this afternoon that the reason the Supreme Court did not decide the Laclede Gas case to-day was mainly due to an editorial in the Post Sunday, in which sarcastic comment was made on the break. The Post said that the break of four points in the Laclede stock was due to the report that the court had decided against the company and suggested that it was altogether too common an incident for Supreme Court decisions to be hawked about for sale in advance.

The incident bids fair to grow into a scandal.

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH.

Defective Stovepipe Causes a Fatal Fire in New York State.

PERRY, N. Y., Nov. 30.—A defective stovepipe started a fire in the house of Luther Greenman, a farmer living near here. The entire family of five persons, consisting of Greenman, his wife and three children, were burned into an unrecognizable condition.

When the market opened Monday morning May wheat showed an advance of 15c. The closing price Saturday was 92½ and Monday's opening 93½.

Early news was decidedly bullish. Foreign advices showed that there had been a decrease of 2,000,000 bushels in the European stock of wheat since Aug. 1, in spite of the enormous world's shipments to Europe.

This was considered by many the most bullish news received this year and had an immediate effect on the market, though trading was very light.

May wheat went as high as 94½/95½. At this point bearish news began to come in and the market receded accordingly.

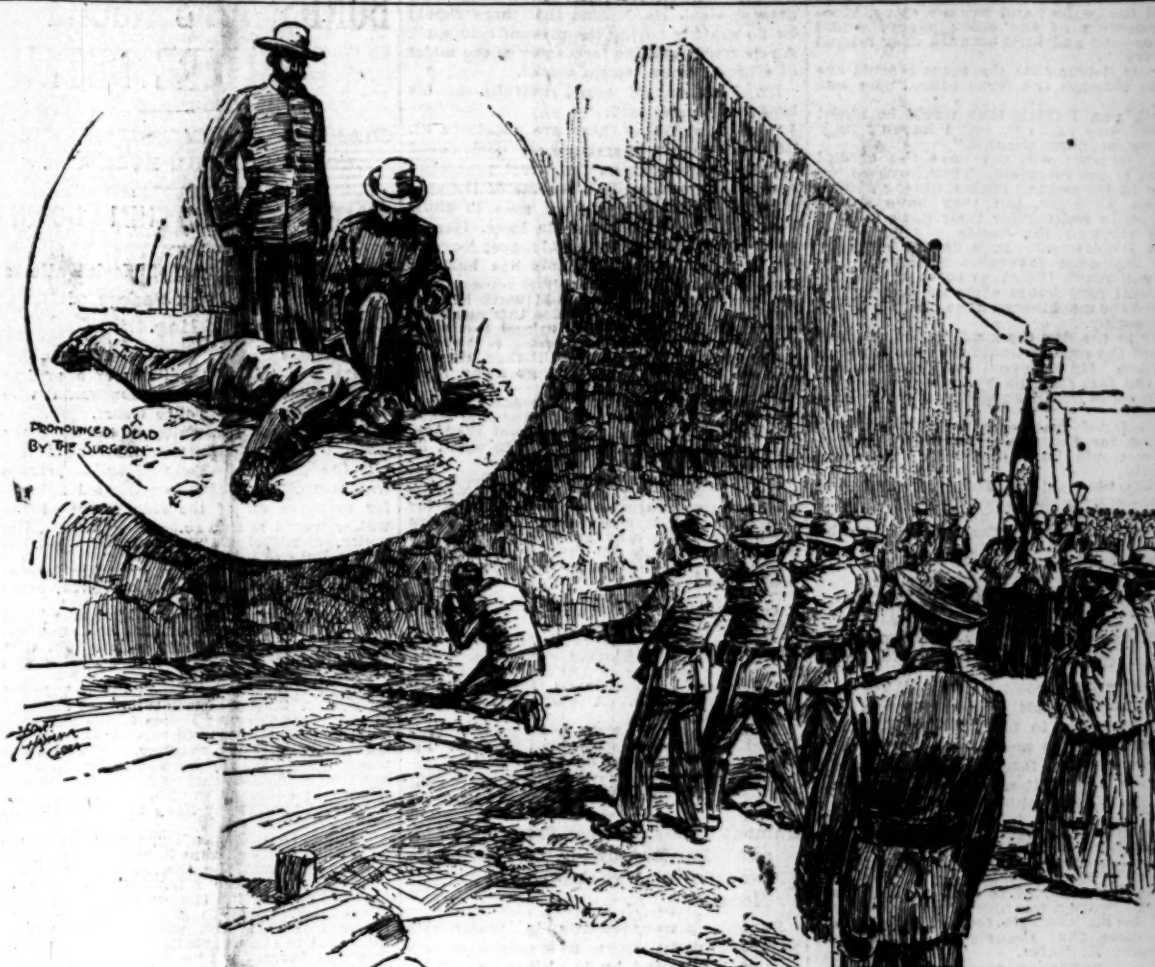

One of the most potent factors in hammering down the price was the news of a heavy decrease in the European demand for American flour. It was stated that European buyers were buying the Hungarian flour in preference to the American patents and substituting the French product for the commoner American grades.

This had an immediate effect on the wheat market, as a decreased demand for flour means a decreased demand for wheat. Still another bearish influence was a cable from the Viceroy of India, stating that while the rains there had come too late to help the autumn crop; it was in time for the late sowing. The same cable said that prices in India showed a tendency to drop, having already fallen off from 20 to 50 per cent in the northern districts.

These reports sent the market as low as 92½, where it was stationary for some time, advancing later to 93½, but quickly dropping back to 92.

Things were very dull around the pit all morning, few trades being made. Saturday's report that a large grain firm in Berlin had failed, began to have its effect Monday, adding another to the prevailing bearish conditions.

The market grew weaker late in the day, closing at 93½, a drop of 1½ off the opening.

BEARS HAD IT ALL THEIR WAY.

FURTHER ADVANCES IN MAY WHEAT CHECKED.

BAD NEWS FROM EUROPE.

Opening was 1-5-8 Over Saturday, but There Was 1-8 Decline on the Day.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. BOWLING GREEN, Mo., Nov. 30.—Digger Frier of this city has just received a telegram from Wolfe City, Tex., stating that his son, Jephtha D. Frier, died at that place this morning. Jep Frier is the telegraph operator who killed Landlord Hacker at Pacific, Mo., a few weeks ago. It is known here that Frier had pneumonia some days ago.

BANK CLOSED.

The Missouri National Bank City Forced to Quit.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 30.—The Missouri National Bank closed its doors this morning, owing to heavy withdrawals of one of its principal depositors. Deposits are $1,500,000. The bank was closed one of the strongest in the Southwest.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the following notice was placed on the door:

"By order of the directors this bank has been closed and is in the hands of the Comptroller."

This action was precipitated by the withdrawal of $50,000 in one lump by Helm, the wealthy local brewer, whose action was quickly followed by others.

The last statement issued by the bank showed deposits of $1,561,000, and cash and exchanges amounting to $44,000. Its officials are D. V. Rieger, President, and D. R. Covington, Cashier. In the panic of July, 1893, the Missouri National was one of the local banks to go under, but it soon reopened.

The bank had been open to-day for just an hour when the Comptroller took charge of its affairs. The closing came as a surprise to the officers. They were thoroughly disconcerted by the action and too excited to make a statement. The same surprise was evinced everywhere, other banks believing the Missouri National to have regained its prestige and to be in a flourishing condition. No fears were expressed by other leading bankers that the failure would spread.

Absolutely no figures on the assets or liabilities are obtainable. Up to 1:30 this afternoon the officials flatly refused to make a statement regarding the bank's condition, or whether it would likely resume business. The general opinion, however, is that this second failure will ultimately end in the bank winding up its affairs.

MAX ALVARY CURED.

The Tenor Has Undergone a Successful Operation.

JENNA, Saxe-Weimar-Meiningen, Nov. 30.—The reports circulated in the United States that Max Alvary, the singer, is critically ill, are misleading. The singer recently underwent a successful operation, which resulted in a complete cure. He is now taking long excursions daily.

SOCIETY GIRLS AS WAITRESSES.

HIGH-BORN MAIDS SERVING DINNERS FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

IT IS AN ANNUAL AFFAIR.

Young Ladies' Mission of St. John's Methodist Church Feeding the Business Men.

Fair church workers and pretty society girls transformed the fourth floor of Hudson's building, Broadway and Locust street, into a scene of loveliness and good cheer Monday morning.

Members of the Young Ladies' Mission of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church were at work bright and early arranging the big room for their big mission dinner.

A force of men of course did the heavy work, but the young ladies embellished the room with draperies and little feminine conceits, which changed it from a commonplace business apartment to an elaborately appointed dining-room.

The Young Ladies' Mission of St. John's Church numbers among its members some of the best known and most highly accomplished local society girls.

They have worked hard to insure its success, and with favorable results, for it is one of the city's most charitable church societies.

Each year during the fall season some enterprise is projected to raise funds for the maintenance of the mission.

This year a dinner was decided on as a means whereby to deflect the coin of the realm from the pockets of the well-to-do into those of the hungry poor.

J. L. Hudson's offer of the entire fourth floor of his establishment was accepted.

Miss Lida Wallace, president of the mission, worked early and late to secure the success of the dinner. Fifty young society girls volunteered to act as waitresses, and ten well-known matrons offered their services as chaperones.

Fifty tables have been arranged in the big room for the accommodation of 300 diners.

The first dinner was served at noon. There was a large attendance at that hour. Fifty cents is the price charged for a dinner, and the proceeds will go to the mission. Dinner is served from 12 to 3. Another dinner will be served Tuesday.

A SECRET SPRING.

It Was Touched by Chance and Revealed Great Wealth and Proof of Swindling.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Assistant District Attorney George Gordon Battle touched a secret spring by chance while sitting alone in his office in the Criminal Court buildings and was soon looking at bonds and certificates of stock to the value of hundreds of thousands of dollars, possibly millions of dollars, and what he considered great fortune, he had in his hands evidence that he had long sought, and which may connect men who are suspected to be connected with the great syndicate of swindlers.

The spring was in the side of the iron box found two weeks ago in the trunk of Charles H. McLaughlin, one of the conspirators to rob, with which Stephen A. Sutton, the Seattle broker and others now under indictment for swindling are said to be connected.

The box has been in Mr. Battle's office for several days and its known contents had been examined several times. Damaging evidence against members of the gang had been found in the box. That document, evidence rested upon a false bottom, between which and the true bottom of the box Mr. Battle found much vital information and wealth of bonds and certificates of stock, some of which are known to be worthless paper issued by the swindle syndicate, some of which appeared genuine, and some of which will have to be looked up before its worth or worthlessness can be determined.

DARING ROBBERY.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. STURGIS, Ky., Nov. 30.—Five men were arrested at Marion this morning on suspicion of being concerned in the Post-office hold-up at this place Saturday night. Postmaster Dyer was checking up the business of the day at about 7:45, the Post-office being deserted, when a large, heavy-set man entered, walked past the general delivery window, and, poking a revolver in the Postmaster's face, ordered him to blow out the light and lock the door, which he did. Another man entering at the same time, they went through the safe and secured $500 in stamps and $200 in money. They then bound and gagged the Postmaster, and escaped through the back door. The robbery was not discovered for over an hour, when Mr. Dyer was released. The street was full of people at the time, and it was the most daring robbery ever committed in this county.

KILLED HIS NEPHEW.

The Slayer Was Aiming to Shoot His Own Brother.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. PINE BLUFF, Ark., Nov. 30.—George White, colored, near town, was before the court this morning for murdering his nephew, a little boy aged 7 years. The proof seems to be that White drew a pistol to shoot his brother, but accidentally the shot struck the nephew, killing him instantly.

THE REICHSSTAG.

BITTER DEBATE ON THE BUDGET HAS BEGUN.

THE ESTIMATES CRITICISED.

Herr Fritzen, Centrist, Declares That the Life-Blood of the Nation Shall Not Be Drawn.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The debate on the budget was commenced in the Reichstag today. Count von Posadowsky, the Secretary of the Treasury, dwelt upon the favorable financial position and stated that the surplus for 1898-99 would probably be 24,754,000 marks, from which would have to be deducted 3,000,000 marks to cover the supplementary estimates. For the year, he added, was the first since 1875 in which there has been no increase in the public debt.

Proceeding, the Secretary demonstrated the necessity of increasing the salaries of the public officials as provided in the estimates. (Cheers from the right.)

Herr Fritzen, Centrist, criticised the estimates of 1897-98 as being less favorable than those of the current year. In doing so he referred to the dissatisfaction felt by the people at the excessive military pensions. He declared that the sum demanded for expenditures was exorbitant, and insisted that reductions were absolutely necessary. He added that the sum demanded from the iron-ore tax to replace the Koenig Wilhelm and for the new cruisers will not be voted, as the Reichstag was not favorably disposed to the "illimitable naval schemes of the Government."

"We will not allow our very life blood to be drawn nor will we be alarmed by the phantom of a world-embracing policy which once before drove the German Empire to its doom." (Centrist and Leftist cheers.)

CHAUVIN RELEASED.

Not the Original One, but a Parisian Deputy and Socialist.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—In the Chamber of Deputies today M. Jourde, Socialist, representing the Chateau division of Seine et Oise, moved that the House order the immediate release of M. Chauvin, the Parisian Deputy, who was arrested yesterday during the outbreak at Carnaux against the visiting Socialists.

M. Jourde said this was not a party question, but concerned the dignity of Parliament.

M. Barthou, the Minister of the Interior, replied that the magistrates and the police were prosecuting because there had been a flagrant offense of the law. But if the Chamber ordered his release and the suspension of the prosecution the Government would bow to its decision. The motion was adopted by a vote of 286 to 78.

CONFISCATED HIS REMIT.

James A. Hodges Accuses the Police of Persecution.

James A. Hodges, the inventor of the fender in use on the Union Depot street car lines, claims to be a victim of police oppression. He was arrested Saturday on an order of $100 fine for disturbing the peace. He claims to have been arrested by the police of the city of St. Louis, and that the officer a remittance of the fine signed by him.

When his fender was patented he employed the law firm of Peabody & Bentley to attend to the matter. He claims to have been arrested by the police of the city of St. Louis, and that the officer a remittance of the fine signed by him.

He claimed that Judge Peabody's prejudice cost him a fine of $100 which was stayed until 9 p. m., providing in the meantime that he should not be arrested. He said that the same day Hodges went to the Mayor and got the fine remitted. Since then he always carried that document in his pocket.

Saturday evening an officer recognized Hodges as having got "hours" some time ago and placed him under arrest. Hodges showed him the remittance of his fine by the Mayor, but the officer refused to accept it and he was locked up. When searched at the station he says this remittance was confiscated. The Sergeant in charge denies having seen any such document.

Hodges remained in jail until Monday. His case was then continued until December 5.

CONDUCTOR BADLY BEATEN.

Found With Two Head Wounds Made by Boot Heels.

Stephen Scott, a conductor on the Broadway car line, living at 2845 Blair avenue, was found unconscious at Eleventh and Palm streets, Sunday evening about 8 o'clock.

He was taken to the North End Dispensary and Dr. W. Mulligan, attending physician, examined him. He had been beaten about two inches long and close together. The closed head wounds were on the top of his head and the wounds were caused by kicks from a boot heel.

It took about three hours to revive Scott and then he was in a dazed condition and said his memory was blank in regard to anything that occurred after 8 o'clock. He remembered nothing of how he was hurt.

Scott took a day off yesterday to spend with a friend who was visiting him. In the evening he went out for a walk. He was seen to pass the corner of Broadway and Salisbury street about half-past 8 o'clock.

When he recovered consciousness, his condition indicated that he had been dragged and assaulted afterward.

Dr. Randall reported it to the police at once, but they have been unable so far to get any clue.

Jerry Caples' Murderer Held.

William Gangel was held to the Grand Jury without bail Monday. He was charged with murder in the second degree. On Thanksgiving Day, 1898, he shot and killed Jerry Caples in the saloon at Broadway and Chestnut streets. He escaped after a short and easy flight.

He was taken to Chicago, where he was held for two weeks ago.

DR. STARKLOFF RETURNS.

Dispensary Reporters to Be Given a Chance at News.

Health Commissioner Dr. Starkloff was at his office at the City Hall again Monday morning after a three weeks' pursuit of quack ducks, antelope and bear in the vicinity of Paw-Paw Junction.

When a delegation of aggrieved newspaper reporters called on him to learn what truth there was in the rumors of a new regime, under which the reporters would be leading part and the reporters be banished from the sacred Dispensary precincts, he was diplomatic, as becomes an aspirant for Mayoralty honors.

"I haven't made up my mind about that," he said. "I haven't and I have. I suggested some such reform before I went away. You see there has been altogether too much publicity about the Dispensary hereafter. When a patient came in every body could hear what was said. If a reporter happened to be around he interviewed the patient and wrote a story. Then the reporters of the other papers would come around and kick because they missed the story."

"But it is true that the press reports are to pass through the front office," he was asked.

"Well, yes, I think that would be about the best way to do it, but I haven't fully made up my mind about it."

The "reform" will not have the cordial support of the Dispensary. They have no objection to Dispensary patients being shielded from publicity, but they have strong objection to waiting for their news until it passes through the hands of the entire Health Department. It is feared that under the most favorable conditions the news will reach the press room across the hall about four hours after its occurrence, provided the machinery of the office is working smoothly.

Later in the day the good doctor related and said the reports would not pass through the State reporter's office. He said that from the fact that he had given orders to have reports of all accidents made to him promptly, he had been able to get the news of the Dispensary Committee of the Council Tuesday and recommended a number of changes to correct the errors in the reports pointed out by Counselor Marshall.

He was too busy to discuss politics.

AFTER THE OTHER BATES.

Detectives Seeking for a Witness in the A. K. Ward Case.

Detective Ike Wolf of Memphis, Tenn., is in St. Louis on his way to Sorento, Ill., where he hopes to find Wesley H. Bates, who is wanted as an important witness in the famous Ward forgery case in Memphis. Detective Joe Hutton was detailed to accompany the Memphis officer.

A. K. Ward is in jail in Memphis with 15 indictments against him, aggregating $150,000, hanging over his head. Before the forgery was discovered, Ward had been in the hands of the Memphis police. He was captured in Honduras. Several of the forged documents purported to bear the signature of W. H. Bates, a well-known St. Louisan. Ward denies that he forged Bates' name for the purpose of carrying out the forgery of the signature was that of Wesley H. Bates.

SPURIOUS SILVER COINS.

Two Remarkably Fine Counterfeits Found Here.

While one of the Sub-Treasury clerks was counting a sack of 1,000 silver dollars received from a Texas bank, Monday, he found two finely executed counterfeit coins. The discovery of spurious silver dollars is a common occurrence in the Sub-Treasury. Three or four were found Saturday. They are rare, but not new. The counterfeiters are using the same dies as the genuine coins, and the amount of the silver composition, less the number of spurious coins, is about 100,000.

Sub-Treasurer Small was amazed at the work on one of the counterfeiters found. The counterfeit was so well made that it was found to be 80 grains short of the standard silver dollar weight of 26.7 grains. It was thicker than a genuine dollar and the milling on the edge was not perfect. The other coin was 80 grains short of the standard silver dollar weight of 26.7 grains. It was thicker than a genuine dollar and the milling on the edge was not perfect.

Mr. Small says that the number of spurious silver dollars is large and is increasing. They come from all directions and are hard to detect.

THROW DOWN FOR BUTLER.

An Employee of the Boss Fined for Beating a Mule.

Col. Ed Butler came to grief in the First District Police Court Monday.

He was "trun in de air" by Judge Peabody.

Tim Kennedy, colored, who drives a sloop wagon and carries swill from the hotels to Col. Butler's stink works, brutally beat one of his mules on South Broadway Saturday and offered to assault a citizen who restrained him.

He was arrested and notwithstanding the fact that at the police station he said that he was working for Col. Butler, he was locked up.

In Police Court Monday Kennedy's principal point of defense was that he was an employee of Col. Butler. He was particularly told Judge Peabody that he had been working for Butler a long time, and that the Colonel and Maj. Harrigan were great friends.

The word Butler was no answer to the Peabody heart.

"And you beat that mule so that he bled?"

"I'll fine you $25," was the scathing reply, but the defendant was not to be deterred.

"I'll tell Mr. Butler," said Kennedy as he was being led back to the cell.

HEAVY ICE COMING.

Preparations to Put River Craft in Winter Quarters.

Sunday and Monday were busy days for the Harbor and Wharf Department. Work came that led had Kansas City in large quantities and the scavenger and street boats had to be got in shape for retreat to winter quarters.

By Monday evening half of the boats of the department will be safely harbored and if the weather map indicates a continuance of the present mild but two scavenger boats and two street boats will be retired Tuesday.

The remaining boats will be placed at the foot of Locust street and the foot of Chouteau avenue.

Nearly all the packets are also going into winter quarters.

Dr. J. H. Mulligan, Acting Commissioner, expects, if all the predictions of a severe winter are realized, that the river will be closed about three hours to the west, therefore, chills slowly, but if the present continues another week, the stream will close.

LOCAL COLD WAVE IS A STAYER.

THE RECORD FOR NOVEMBER IS SHATTERED TO PIECES.

WARMER WEATHER WEDNESDAY.

Dr. Frankenkfield Says That the St. Louis Folks Do Not Appreciate His Mastery Tour de Force.

Weather Speculator Frankenkfield broke his pipe Monday morning and straightway grew cynical. He decided that there should be no skating during the present cold spell. A reporter found the forecast in the midst of a blue Monday storm center.

Dr. Frankenkfield gazed ruefully at his broken pipe and said:

"Don't you know there are people in St. Louis who don't appreciate my cold wave? A man stopped me on the street yesterday and asked me what had become of the cold wave I had predicted. That goes to show how little sense some people have. Here I go to work and furnish the longest November cold spell that St. Louis has had for sixteen years and then a fellow comes along and asks me where that cold wave is."

"I come to the office this morning, and about 300 people drop in and ask what kind of a winter we are going to have. I don't know any more about it than they do and tell them so, and they go away muttering 'fool'."

"To make matters worse I break my pipe. I have a good notion to call the cold wave off. In fact, I think I will. I will turn it off. One thing is certain. There won't be any skating this winter."

"It will get warmer during the day. To-night will be pretty cold, but there will be a rise in temperature to-morrow, and a break and a somewhat decided rise Wednesday. It may go as high as 40 degrees, the average."

The weather during the cold spell has been away below the average.

It is setting warmer in the immediate west, but it is 20 below in North Dakota and North Minnesota.

"The cold wave covers the South everywhere except the Florida Peninsula. There is freezing weather as far south as Alabama. The Atlantic Coast is feeling the cold wave too. It is 30 above at New York this morning."

"If my next cold wave is properly appreciated there may be some snow. I'll get my pipe fixed and see about it."

A BOLD STROKE.

Famous Scores Another Trade Triumph and Is Rewarded by Immense Crowds That Tax the Capacity of the House.

Famous announcements in yesterday's papers brought out a tremendous throng this morning, and by 10 o'clock the aisles were well high impassible.

The crowd had been strongly reinforced for the occasion, and all comers were well taken care of. The story of famous' tremendous purchases, aggregating over $125,000, from the very finest wholesale tailors in America, has spread like wildfire, and everybody seems to know of it.

The names of the firms from whom these purchases were made are a guarantee of the quality of the goods. Here are the names, known all over the civilized world:

Peckham, Pishel & Co., 745 Broadway, New York, manufacturers of men's finest suits.

Peck & Hauchous, 365 Broadway, New York, who make a specialty of the manufacture of children's clothing.

The selection, excellent as it was, was extremely overstocked, and famous ready cash secured the cream of the goods. The prices little short of marvelous. These purchases, added to famous' ready cash stocks, gave their patrons a range of styles and fabrics to select from almost endless.

Fairly confidently expected that the crowd will be repeated every day for the next two weeks. The low prices they are now in a position to name for the kind of magnets, and are bound to bring a new wave of business to the corner Broadway and Morgan—Famous.

TRAIN ROBBERS' TRIAL.

Constitutionality of the Death Penalty Law Being Argued.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEVADA, Mo., Nov. 30.—The case of the State against Henry Vaughn, William B. Morris and William Rogers was called in court to-day. Vaughn, Morris and Rogers held up and robbed a train near here in May 1897. A few weeks later they were arrested at Evansville, after robbing a store, and were later turned over to the Missouri authorities. During the robbery at this place, the train was shot in the face by a conductor, Attorney Gibson and Hon. H. B. Blanton, recent candidate for Congress, who conducted the prosecution. L. J. Scott and W. B. Bower will try to save the prisoners' lives. Mr. Scott demurred to the indictment, claiming that the act of 1893 which inflicted death on this class of robbery was unconstitutional. Judge Stanton is now being argued before Judge Stanton. There are seven indictments against each of the prisoners.

WAS OVERWORKED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Robert E. Marshall, 34 years old, superintendent of the Altoona division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, shot himself at his brother's house. In Washington, to-day, Mr. Marshall was one of the most valued young men in the Pennsylvania Railroad. For some time he has been suffering from acute nervous troubles resulting from overwork and it is to this that the tragedy is attributed. He was a son of J. W. Marshall, at one time a professor at Carleton College, Pa., Consul to Leeds during the war and Assistant Postmaster-General under President Grant. His sister, who was Miss Tyson of Maryland, died a year ago and this doubtless contributed to the condition which brought about his end. He leaves two sons.

BONDSMAN'S AGONY IN DIRE DETAIL.

CHANCES ARE THAT FOSTER WILL GO OUT OF THE BUSINESS.

WAITER "TRUN" HIM DOWN.

A Belligerent Slinger of Hash Fails to Show Up on a Charge of Fighting.

Here is a tale of the trials of a professional bondsman—a petty bondsman who had a sin on the Police Court.

Henry Schaeffer, a waiter at the Southern Hotel, was arrested last Friday for disturbing the peace of Tony Faust's private club. The watchman wanted Schaeffer to move off of the sidewalk, and the waiter would not do so. Then a fight, the police, a patrol wagon and the Chestnut Street Police Station.

Charles Foster, Jr., the grogshop keeper on Eleventh street and Clark avenue, came into the Police Court yesterday.

Foster keeps a saloon as a kind of a blind for his property. He is a kind of a bondsman. He was arrested last Friday for disturbing the peace of his saloon, and was told that Foster would bail him out, and Foster was not there.

The bond of $200 was made out and signed by Foster. Schaeffer was released to appear in court on Friday morning.

Foster was to receive $3 for signing the bond, but Schaeffer said Saturday was his pay day and he would then pay the bondsman. But Saturday Schaeffer did not appear in court, and Foster has a lawyer have the case continued to December 5.

During Saturday afternoon Foster received information that Schaeffer was to be released from the Southern, and would probably leave the city. Foster then sent his assistant in the bond business, John D. Hurley, to the Southern Hotel, and with instructions to take him to the Chestnut Street Police Station, where he was to be released.

Hurley found Schaeffer, and induced the latter to accompany him to the Chestnut Street Police Station, where he was to be released. Foster refused to lock Schaeffer up, as they said that Foster would have to surrender the bond in person.

Then Hurley wanted Schaeffer to go with him to the Police Court, and the complaint set out that during the campaign he made himself obnoxious by breaking up gatherings of the opposite political faith.

While they fought Patrolman O'Connor them up to the Police Court, and took them both of them were locked up.

Then Schaeffer sent for another bondsman, and he was to appear in Police Court on Monday. Foster, the bondsman, is happy.

ISAAC SWOPE HAS FAILED.

HE MANUFACTURED PRIZE PACK-AGE "GOLD" WATCHES.

IN BUSINESS TWENTY YEARS.

The Total Liabilities Are Estimated at $75,000, With Nominal Assets of $50,000.

Isaac Swope & Co., manufacturers of "Gold" watch cases, at 118 North Third street, have failed. The total liabilities are estimated at $75,000 with nominal assets of $50,000.

The assignment was made in New York City, where the firm had a branch office on an account of $73,000. The firm has a branch office in New York conducted by Swope & Co., and is a subsidiary of the Swope & Co. Co., the largest and oldest cheap watch case manufacturers in the country. The firm has a branch office at the building at 118 North Third street, opposite the Merchants' Exchange.

On Sept. 22 the factory was closed down, and when running full force they employed the firm in making "gold" and stamping cases. The company turned out thousands of these watches daily.

Over a year ago the firm began to get into deep water. The force was cut down and wages were reduced. There was a constant shrinkage in the working force until only twelve hands were employed in the factory.
